'Privacy Chat' Draws Huge Participation

by Mark Stanley [1]
October 27, 2010

This past Tuesday, CDT moderated the first weekly 'privacy chat' on Twitter through our @CenDemTech [2] account. If participation and volume are measuring sticks, it was a great success. Over 600 tweets were sent out on Tuesday featuring our chat hashtag #PrivChat. Of course, numbers alone don't equal success. The ultimate goal of features like the privacy chat and Ask CDT [3] is to better engage Internet users on online privacy. Through our Take Back Your Privacy campaign [4], we offer the opportunity to turn knowledge about privacy issues into action.

A special thanks is owed to @PrivacyCamp [5]'s Shaun Dakin, who worked tirelessly to raise awareness and organize the privacy chat, and to CDT privacy experts Justin Brookman (@JustinBrookman [6]) and Erica Newland (@EricaNewland [7]), who replied to questions and comments during the chat.

You can see a transcript of the chat here [8]. If you have topic suggestions for #PrivChat, please leave them in the comments section below and include your name and/or Twitter handle in the comment. We hope to see you at the next #PrivChat, Tuesday, noon eastern.

-
- Twitter
- privacy chat
- privacy

Copyright © 2013 by Center for Democracy & Technology.
The content on this website is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 3.0 Unported License. Text from CDT can be freely copied and used as long as you make no substantive changes and clearly give us credit. Details.
Source URL: https://www.cdt.org/blogs/mark-stanley/privacy-chat-draws-huge-participation

Links:
[1] https://www.cdt.org/personnel/mark-stanley
[2] http://twitter.com/#!/CenDemTech
[3] http://cdt.org/blogs/cdt/ask-cdt-answers-social-media-privacy
[4] http://cdt.org/takebackyourprivacy
[5] http://twitter.com/#!/PrivacyCamp
[6] http://twitter.com/#!/JustinBrookman
[7] http://twitter.com/#!/ericanewland
[8] http://wthashtag.com/Privchat